

Formosa

Formosa, three young men, on stage together since their school days in southern German province, now landed in Essen in the Ruhr area, is a band that is not ashamed of nudity. Please what?

That's right, Formosa have undressed their music, they themselves call it "Hard'n'Heavy".

And while with similar groups the motto is often: higher, more pompous, more garish, Formosa return to the state of nature, which is: an electric guitar, a bass, a drum set – music in loincloth so to speak.

Already on the first two albums "Tight & Sexy" (2016) and "Sorry for Being Sexy" (2018) the band showed that the reduction is the biggest thing about their songs. Drums, Riffs and enough space for some unusual hooks. In this period, they played more than 200 shows with Bands like "The New Roses", "Thundermother", "Bonfire" and "Battle Beast" and went on their first bigger tour through the Balkan countries. This was their School of Rock. In the beginning of 2019, they played a support tour with the legends of Nazareth, followed by a busy festival summer.

For 2020 the band has released their third studio album "Danger Zone" in collaboration with Metalville Records. Therefore, they barricaded themselves in a studio in Antwerp with Martin Furia (Vanderbuyst, Destruction, Nervosa) to record their best album so far. With the mission to revive the feeling of the 80s, which the three guys know only from legends and stories, and to transport it into the year 2020. The following tour with Norwegian hard rockers Audrey Horne started great but couldn't be completed because of the upcoming Pandemic. Formosa's mission for 2021 is to bring back hard rock in live venues. Therefore they will play an extended tour through Germany in November.
